SECTION 1

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Introduction

In the 1981 Census of Population and Housing, information relating to industry of employment was collected in respect of persons aged 15 years and over who were employed members of the labour force.

This paper outlines the concepts underlying industry coding, describes how the codes are obtained from answers to the census questions, and explains and lists the industry classification system used. In addition, this paper describes the classification of employers to the private or public sectors.

The questions relating to industry

Two questions were included on the census schedule to determine industry of employment. The 1981 industry questions (Questions 28 and 29) were presented in the following manner:

28. For the main job held LAST WEEK, what was the employer's trading name and address of workplace? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • For persons conducting their own business, print name of own business. • For teachers, print name of school. • For government employees, print full name of Department, Division, Branch or Section. • For persons with no fixed place of work last week, e.g. airline pilots, taxi drivers, etc., write "N/A" in "Address of workplace". 	USE BLOCK LETTERS Business or trading name Name of Division, Branch or Section (if any) in which the person worked Address of workplace : No. and street..... Suburb, town or locality..... State..... Postcode.....
29. What kind of industry, business or service is carried out by your employer at the address given in reply to question 28? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Describe as fully as possible, using two words or more (e.g. dairy farming, footwear manufacturing). 	Kind of industry.....

While information on kind of industry carried out by the employer at the workplace has been included in each census of population and housing since 1911, the name of employer and address of workplace have been requested only since the 1954 Census, when they were introduced to facilitate the coding of industry where the information supplied was inadequate. Prior to the 1966 Census, information on industry was also collected and coded with respect to unemployed persons for whom data relating to industry of last employment (if any) was collected.

What is an industry?

The allocation of an industry class to an establishment (work location) is a statement about the main kind of economic activity understood to be carried out there. An establishment can be a farm, a factory, a shop, a mine, or any other place where some kind of economic activity is performed, i.e. a product produced or a service rendered.

The industry classification system used by the ABS (and used in industry coding for the 1981 Census) was the Australian Standard Industrial Classification (ASIC), 1978 Edition.

According to the ASIC rules, each establishment is classified to a particular industry class. This industry class accords with the main activity of the establishment.

The industry of employment of an employed person is the industry class appropriate to the establishment at which he or she works. There is not, however, any necessary relationship between the occupation of individuals and the industry in which they work; for example, a van driver for an establishment designated as in the insurance industry is employed in that industry, not in the transport industry.

Related census characteristics

Industry should not be confused with two other related census characteristics: occupational status and occupation.

Employed persons (to whom an industry of employment can be attributed) are also classified to one of four occupational or worker statuses:

Status 1, a wage or salary earner;

Status 2, a person conducting his/her own business but not employing others;

Status 3, a person conducting his/her own business and employing others; or Status 4, a helper in a family business working more than 15 hours a week but not receiving wages or salary.

Each person working in an industry performs some kind of occupation. Individuals performing quite different occupations, or kinds of work, may be employed by the same establishment but all will belong to the one industry to which the establishment is coded.

The labour force

In the processing of the census, industry is coded only for those people who are employed members of the labour force. An understanding of who constitutes the labour force and the employed is necessary for an understanding of census industry.

Who is in the labour force?

For the 1981 Census, the labour force was defined as persons aged 15 years or more who were either:

(a) employed, that is

(i) worked for wages, salary, payment or profit during the week prior to census night or helped without pay in a family business for more than 15 hours; or

(ii) had a job from which they were temporarily absent because they were on recreation leave, sick, on strike, temporarily stood down, etc. during the week prior to census night;

or were

(b) unemployed, that is, did not work and did not have a job but were actively looking for work during the week prior to census night.

Helpers in a family business not receiving wages or salary, and who worked less than 15 hours in the week prior to census night, were not included in the labour force.

Only employed members of the labour force i.e. categories (a) (i) and (ii) above have been coded to the industry of the employer. The labour force status questions are contained in Appendix A. A diagram of the composition of the labour force is contained in Appendix B.

Industry classification

The Australian Standard Industrial Classification, 1978 Edition, Volume 2 (1202.0) (ASIC) is the standard system for classifying establishments by industry in the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS). The census classification of industry is based on the ASIC.

The structure of the ASIC comprises 4 levels: divisions (the broadest level), subdivisions, groups and classes. Each ASIC Class is defined in terms of a specific range of activities designated as primary to it. Similarly, each group is defined in terms of the activities designated as primary to the classes within that group and so on.

The ASIC, adopted for the 1971, 1976 and 1981 Censuses, was modified for census purposes to include a 'not stated' category and more general categories for responses which could not be classified to the most detailed level of the ASIC (see below).

The ASIC at the most detailed level (class) uses a 4 digit code. The individual industries are arranged in a hierarchical structure as follows:

broadest level	division	alphabetic code
	subdivision	2 digit numeric code
	group	3 digit numeric code
most detailed level	class	4 digit numeric code

For census processing, a further modification involved the inclusion of 'undefined' categories at each level of the classification to provide for cases where the answers to Question 29 were too imprecise to enable the allocation of a 'defined' ASIC code. For example, Group 814, Hospitals and nursing homes, includes the undefined Class 8140, Hospitals and nursing homes undefined. This category would be used when kind of industry was reported as hospital or nursing hospital and no other information was available to allow coding to a defined class in Group 814. Before allocating an undefined code, every effort is made, using all available information on the schedule, to allocate a defined industry code.

There are 594 classes in the classification which is contained in Section 2 of this paper. Copies of the complete 1978 Edition of ASIC Volume 1 (1201.0) and Volume 2 (1202.0) on which the census processing manuals were based are available from offices of the ABS (see Appendix C). The ASIC Volume 1 contains the detailed industry definitions and Volume 2 is an alphabetic index of primary activities (of industry classes).

Certain industry descriptions appearing in the classification in Section 2 of this paper are qualified by one of the following:

- n.e.c. This term is an abbreviation for 'not elsewhere classified'.
- own account This term is used in the description of certain ASIC industries, namely ASIC Class 1611 Petroleum Exploration (own account) and Class 1612 Mineral Exploration n.e.c. (own account) and these industries are defined to include establishments mainly engaged in providing mineral exploration services for use within the owning enterprise.

Industry coding

The main index used in determining the industry of employment in census processing is the Industry and Destination Zone (IDZ) Index. This index is also the main source of information on the public/private sector classification of individual establishments, i.e. it is used to determine whether the employer is in the private sector or in the public (government) sector.

The IDZ Index is a listing of all known establishments in Australia at the time of its compilation which were involved in various economic activities-locations operated by companies, partnerships, sole proprietors, government departments, etc.

It contains, for each establishment, the relevant ASIC codes, public/private sector codes, and destination zone (DZN) codes. The listing was obtained from the 1980 version of the ABS Integrated Register. This register is compiled and updated by the ABS from various statistical collections.

The only establishments excluded from the IDZ Index are those classified to the ASIC Subdivision 01: Agriculture, which includes farms, orchards, market gardens, grazing properties. Most of these establishments are coded from the Rural Industry Index which was obtained from the 1980 version of the ABS Integrated Agricultural Register.

If an employer's name and address were not located in either the IDZ or Rural Industry Index, industry was coded from the answer given to Question 29 using the ASIC.

About 70 per cent of respondents were able to be coded to an industry from the IDZ and Rural Industry Indexes based on responses to Question 28, and the rest from the industry description given in answer to Question 29.

Public/private sector classification

This classification (catalogue mnemonic GNG) indicates the sector of the economy into which an establishment falls. As in the case of industry, most establishments in Australia have already been allocated a GNG code in the IDZ Index. The classification of GNG is as follows:

Census code	Descriptor
0	Not applicable
	Australian government—
1	departments, including parliamentary departments;
2	other, e.g. legislature, courts, marketing boards, statutory authorities, Australian government owned companies.
	State government—
3	departments, including parliamentary departments;
4	other, e.g. legislature, courts, marketing boards, statutory authorities, State government owned companies.
