Errors have been detected in the publication Census Dictionary, Australia, 2006, released on 26 May 2006. In addition, some standard classifications have been changed since the publication was released. This corrigendum provides tables showing the page number on which each error or change occurs and the correct information.

As changes may continue to occur, final amendments to the Census Dictionary will be released to coincide with the first release of 2006 Census data in mid-2007.

ELECTORAL DIVISION

An electoral division is an area legally prescribed for the purpose of returning one member (or more in the case of the Tasmanian House of Assembly and the Australian Capital Territory Legislative Assembly) to the federal, state or territory lower houses of parliament. Queensland has only one house of parliament at the state level, with each member representing an electoral district. Electoral divisions are approximated by aggregating the data for Collection Districts (CDs) that lie wholly or partly within the area.

Commonwealth Electoral Divisions (CEDs) have different boundaries to State Electoral Divisions (SEDs), except in Tasmania and the ACT where they are the same. CEDs cover all of Australia.

For a list of CEDs and SEDs, see Statistical Geography Volume 2: Census Geographic Areas, Australia (cat. no. 2905.0).
